You, the one who has traveled from afar, across continents. What stories could you tell? How tired must you be!

Troubled waters you have seen, in the journey against the wind
Sea of cold and tepid waters
Of might and fragility
Sea of night and day

You have crushed rocks down to sand

Rocked ships in your arms to deliver them

Today you come here, to this place where your waters find peace

A resting place where struggle is no more To finally... surrender to the shore where fragile feet bathe, in your diaphanous warm restful waters
